Subject: Specifies that a franchisor is not the employer of a franchisee or a franchisee's employees for certain social insurance programs

State Fiscal Highlights

- The bill may affect the administrative costs of state agencies that administer the five state laws affected by the bill. It may also affect certain unemployment compensation and workers' compensation claims determinations, as well as premiums and benefits under those programs.

Detailed Fiscal Analysis

The bill specifies that a franchisor is not considered to be an employer of a franchisee or a franchisee's employees for purposes of five state laws. These include the: (1) Minimum Fair Wage Standards Law enforced by the Department of Commerce, (2) Bimonthly Pay Law, also enforced by the Department of Commerce, (3) Unemployment Compensation Law enforced by the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services, (4) Workers' Compensation Law enforced by the Bureau of Workers' Compensation and the Ohio Industrial Commission, and (5) Income Tax Law enforced by the Department of Taxation. The bill does, however, permit a franchisor to agree in writing to assume the role of an employer to a franchisee or a franchisee's employees for purposes of these laws. According to the International Franchise Association's Franchise Business Economic Outlook for 2018, there were 26,962 franchise establishments in Ohio in 2017.¹

The fiscal effects on state agencies responsible for carrying out the five laws mentioned above will vary based on specific circumstances in which the employer-employee relationship needs to be resolved for claims purposes. For example, under the current Unemployment Compensation Law, a franchisee's employees are treated as an employee of either the franchisor or based on a test used to determine which has control over the employee's day-to-day management. As a result, the bill may increase costs for the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services to administer the Unemployment

Compensation Fund if it results in changes to employer accounts or if the Department must adjudicate disputes between franchisors and franchisees. Additionally, these changes may result in an increase or decrease in unemployment taxes brought into the Unemployment Compensation Fund based on the effect each change may have on the experience ratings of the affected employers. Likewise, under the Workers' Compensation Law, the bill in some cases might change circumstances where the Bureau of Workers' Compensation or the Ohio Industrial Commission determines that a franchisor or franchisee is the employer of record for workers' compensation claims purposes. Consequently, there may be some change in premiums collected and deposited into the State Insurance Fund. In regard to the entity responsible for withholding taxes from employees under the Income Tax Law, the bill appears to codify current practice and would have no effect on state tax revenues or by extension on local governments through the Local Government Fund.
