Jason Glover, Senior Budget Analyst

A public school or state institution of higher education may incur some permissive, minimal costs to modify existing classroom curricula if the school or institution, when providing instruction on the topic of American history, chooses to provide instruction on the positive impacts of religion on American history, as permitted by the bill. The bill also specifies a series of historical accounts that can be discussed (see LSC's bill analysis for H.B. 486 for a complete list of the historical accounts specified in the bill).
