DETAILED ANALYSIS

Abolishment of the death penalty in Ohio

The bill abolishes the death penalty in Ohio.

New sentencing for aggravated murder and terrorism

Aggravated murder

Except as described in the next paragraph, the bill requires that a person who is convicted of or pleads guilty to aggravated murder (see “Offenses of aggravated murder and terrorism,” below, for elements of that offense) be sentenced to one of three options:¹

1. Life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 20 full years of imprisonment;
2. Life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 30 full years of imprisonment;
3. Life imprisonment without parole.

If a person is convicted of or pleads guilty to aggravated murder, the victim of the offense under age 13, and the offender also is convicted of or pleads guilty to a “sexual motivation specification” (a defined term) included in the document charging the offense, except as described in the next sentence, the court must impose an indefinite prison term of 30 years to life under the Sexually Violent Predator Sentencing Law. If a person is convicted of or pleads guilty to aggravated murder and also is convicted of or pleads guilty to a sexual motivation specification and a “sexually violent predator specification” (a defined term) included in the document charging the murder, the court must impose a term of life imprisonment without parole under the Sexually Violent Predator Sentencing Law.²

Currently, a sentence of death is a sentencing option in certain circumstances for a person who is convicted of or pleads guilty to aggravated murder (see “Death penalty – current law,” below).

Terrorism

The bill requires that a person who is convicted of or pleads guilty to terrorism when the most serious act of terrorism is aggravated murder (see “Offenses of aggravated murder and terrorism,” below, for elements of that offense) be sentenced to life imprisonment without parole.³

Currently, a sentence of death is a sentencing option in certain circumstances for a person who is convicted of or pleads guilty to terrorism (see “Death penalty – current law,” below).

Treatment of offenders sentenced to death before the bill’s effective date

In general

The bill states that nothing in its provisions is intended to nullify or mitigate the sentence of an offender who was sentenced to death before its effective date.⁴

Resentencing of offenders whose sentences were previously set aside, nullified, or vacated

Under the bill, an offender whose sentence of death has been set aside, nullified, or vacated pursuant to the statute that pertains to the setting aside, nullification, or vacation of a death sentence and resentencing of the offender,⁵ as that statute existed immediately before the bill’s effective date, but who has not been resentenced under that statute as of the bill’s effective date must be resentenced in accordance with that statute as it existed immediately before the bill’s effective date.⁶

⁵ R.C. 2929.06, not in, but repealed by, the bill.

⁶ Section 4(A).

Right to postconviction DNA testing

An offender who was sentenced to death before the bill's effective date will have the same rights to appeal and to postconviction remedies (including DNA testing and having had a serious mental illness at the time of the offense) as the offender had under the provisions of R.C. Chapter 2953 as those provisions existed immediately before the bill's effective date or as those provisions subsequently may be amended, and courts have the same powers and duties with respect to those offenders under those provisions as courts had before the bill's effective date.⁷

Reimbursements for counties' costs of conducting defense in capital cases

Under current law, the State Public Defender must reimburse costs and expenses of conducting the defense in capital cases to each county. The amount of reimbursement is based on the total amount appropriated for the particular fiscal year by the General Assembly for the reimbursement of county appointed counsel offices and systems. If the amount appropriated in a fiscal year is insufficient to pay the cost in the fiscal year of all county appointed counsel offices and systems, the amount of money paid in that fiscal year to each county for the fiscal year is reduced proportionately so that each county is paid an equal percentage of its cost in the fiscal year.⁸

The bill repeals the provisions that pertain to reimbursement in capital cases.⁹ Under the bill, all reports and payments relating to capital cases that were required to be made under any provision of the state's Public Defender Law or R.C. 109.97 (see below) as those provisions existed immediately before the bill's effective date must be made each calendar or fiscal year, as applicable, in accordance with those provisions as they existed immediately before the bill's effective date, and the Capital Case Attorney Fee Counsel created under existing law but repealed by the bill¹⁰ will continue under the provisions of the section that created the Counsel as it existed immediately before the bill's effective date, until each case in which a defendant was sentenced to death before the bill's effective date is finally resolved.¹¹ R.C. 109.97, repealed by the bill, requires the Attorney General to prepare an annual capital case status report that contains information about every individual sentenced to death for committing an aggravated murder.

Death penalty – current law

Current Ohio law allows the death penalty only for the offense of aggravated murder when the offender also is convicted of one or more specifications of an aggravating circumstance and the court determines after applying a specified balancing test that the death penalty is appropriate, or for the offense of terrorism when the most serious offense comprising the terrorism is aggravated murder. When sentencing for terrorism, the same sentencing procedure is used as is used when sentencing for aggravated murder.

Offenses of aggravated murder and terrorism

Aggravated murder

Current law, unchanged by the bill, prohibits many different types of conduct that are included within the offense of aggravated murder. Under that offense, current law prohibits the following acts:¹²

1. Purposely, and with prior calculation and design, causing the death of another or the unlawful termination of another's pregnancy;
2. Purposely causing the death of another or the unlawful termination of another's pregnancy while committing or attempting to commit, or while fleeing immediately after committing or attempting to commit, kidnapping, rape, aggravated arson, arson, aggravated robbery, robbery, aggravated burglary, burglary, trespass in a habitation when a person is present or likely to be present, terrorism, or escape;
3. Purposely causing the death of another if: the other person is under age 13 at the time of the commission of the offense; the offender is under detention as a result of having been found guilty of or having pleaded guilty to a felony or has broken that detention; or the other person is a law enforcement officer whom the offender knows or has reasonable cause to know is a law enforcement officer and either the victim, at the time of the commission of the offense, is engaged in the victim's duties, or it is the offender's specific purpose to kill a law enforcement officer.

Whoever violates one of these prohibitions is guilty of aggravated murder and must be sentenced either to life imprisonment or, if the death penalty potentially is applicable, to death, as discussed below.¹³

Terrorism

Current law, unchanged by the bill, prohibits a person from committing a "specified offense," a defined term that includes aggravated murder, with purpose to intimidate or coerce a civilian population, to influence the policy of any government by intimidation or coercion, or to affect the conduct of any government by the specified offense. Whoever violates the prohibition is guilty of terrorism. The penalty for the offense varies, depending upon the most serious underlying specified offense. If the most serious underlying specified offense is aggravated murder, the offender must be sentenced to life imprisonment without parole or death, using the same procedures that apply with respect to an offender convicted of aggravated murder.¹⁴

¹³ R.C. 2903.01(F), not in the bill, and R.C. 2929.02(A).

Sentencing procedures for aggravated murder

Currently, the only situation in which a person potentially might face a sentence of death is when the person is convicted of the offense of aggravated murder, or terrorism with an underlying charge being an aggravated murder, and one or more specifications of an “aggravating circumstance” (e.g., committed for hire, repeat offense, felony murder, law enforcement officer victim, under age 13 victim, etc.). If a person is convicted of the offense but no such specification, the court must sentence the person to life imprisonment without parole, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 30 full years of imprisonment, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 25 full years of imprisonment, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 20 years of imprisonment, or a special type of life imprisonment under the Sexually Violent Predator Sentencing Law. If a person is convicted of both the offense and one or more such specifications, and did not raise the matter of age or raised that matter and was found to have been 18 or older at the time of the commission of the offense, the trial jury and trial judge or the three-judge panel that tried the case conducts a sentencing hearing to determine whether to sentence the person to death or one of the life sentences described above.

In determining whether to impose the death penalty, the trial jury and trial judge or the three-judge panel conducts at a hearing a “balancing test” of the aggravating circumstances the offender was convicted of committing and all “mitigating factors” in the case (e.g., victim induced offense, offender is youth, offender lacked significant prior criminal history, offender was not principal, etc.), and the offender may be sentenced to death only if the trial jury and trial judge or the three-judge panel determines that the former outweigh the latter in the case. If the trial jury and trial judge or the three-judge panel does not sentence the offender to death, it must sentence the offender to life imprisonment without parole, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 30 full years of imprisonment, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 25 full years of imprisonment, or a special type of sentence of life imprisonment under the Sexually Violent Predator Sentencing Law.

When a sentence of death is imposed, the offender is entitled as a matter of right to an appeal. If the sentence of death is set aside, nullified, or vacated for any of a list of specified reasons (including that the balancing test was not properly applied, the statutory procedure has been found to be unconstitutional, or the offender is mentally retarded, etc.), the trial court must hold a resentencing hearing and sentence the offender to an available type of life imprisonment, under specified procedures. A defendant who asserts that he or she was under age 18 at the time of the alleged commission of the offense and is not found to have been at least age 18 at that time cannot be sentenced to death.

The bill repeals all of these provisions that pertain to the imposition of a sentence of death.¹⁵

Challenge of jurors

Operation of the bill

The bill modifies the current statutory provisions regarding peremptory challenges of jurors. Under the bill, the provisions specify that in criminal cases in which there is only one defendant, each party, in addition to the challenges for cause authorized by law, may peremptorily challenge: (1) three of the jurors in misdemeanor cases, (2) four of the jurors in felony cases other than cases that may subject the defendant to a sentence of life imprisonment, and (3) six of the jurors in cases that may subject the defendant to a sentence of life imprisonment. If there is more than one defendant, each defendant may peremptorily challenge the same number of jurors as if the defendant were the sole defendant. In any case in which there are multiple defendants, the prosecuting attorney may peremptorily challenge a number of jurors equal to the total number of peremptory challenges allowed to all defendants.¹⁶

Existing law

Currently, the numbers of peremptory challenges authorized under the statutory provisions are: (1) three of the jurors in misdemeanor cases, (2) four of the jurors in felony cases other than capital cases, and (3) in capital cases, notwithstanding Criminal Rule 24, 12 of the jurors.¹⁷

Criminal Rule 24 authorizes a different number of peremptory challenges. It specifies that the number of peremptory challenges authorized under the Rule are: (1) three prospective jurors in misdemeanor cases, (2) four prospective jurors in felony cases other than capital cases, and (3) six prospective jurors in capital cases.¹⁸

The statutory provisions and the provisions of the Criminal Rule are in conflict regarding the number of peremptory challenges allowed in capital cases. The Ohio Supreme Court has held that the right to peremptorily challenge jurors is a substantive right, but that the limitation specified in Criminal Rule 24 on the number of such challenges allowed is a procedural matter and that, as a result, under Ohio Constitution, Article IV, Section 5(B), the limitation in the Rule is a provision “governing practice and procedure” and that it controls over the conflicting number specified in the statute and the statute is of no force and effect.¹⁹

Recording of actions and records retention

Current law, unchanged by the bill, requires that all civil and criminal actions in common pleas courts must be recorded, that the reporter must take accurate notes of or electronically record the oral testimony, and that the notes and electronic records must be filed in the office of the official reporter and carefully preserved for one of two specified periods of time.

The first specified period of time under current law requires that if the action is not a capital case, the notes and electronic records must be preserved for the period of time specified by the common pleas court, which period of time may not be longer than the period of time that the other records of the particular action are required to be kept. The bill modifies this provision to specify that if the action is not a case in which a sentence of life imprisonment has been imposed or a case in which, prior to the bill's effective date, a sentence of death was imposed, the notes and electronic records must be preserved for the period of time specified by the common pleas court, which period of time may not be longer than the period of time that the other records of the particular action are required to be kept.

The second specified period of time under current law requires that if the action is a capital case, the notes and electronic records must be preserved for the longer of ten years or until the final disposition of the action and exhaustion of all appeals. The bill modifies this provision to specify that if the action is a case in which a sentence of life imprisonment has been imposed or a case in which, prior to the bill's effective date, a sentence of death has been imposed, the notes and electronic records must be preserved for the longer of ten years or until the final disposition of the action and exhaustion of all appeals.²⁰

The bill requires a court of common pleas that sentenced a defendant to death before the bill's effective date to preserve the records of the action as required by the provisions described in the two preceding paragraphs as they exist immediately before the bill's effective date.²¹

Representation of offenders sentenced to death before effective date

Ohio Public Defender Commission rules

Currently, the Ohio Public Defender Commission is required to adopt rules prescribing minimum qualifications of appointed counsel, with the rules having to prescribe special qualifications for counsel and co-counsel in capital cases. The bill modifies this requirement to specify that the special qualifications portion applies with respect to counsel and co-counsel appointed in capital cases in which the defendant was sentenced to death before the bill's effective date.²²

²⁰ R.C. 2301.20.

²¹ Section 4(D).

²² R.C. 120.03.

Representation in postconviction relief proceedings

In cases in which the defendant was sentenced to death before the bill's effective date, the bill requires attorneys appointed to represent defendants in postconviction relief proceedings to be certified under the Rules for Appointment of Counsel in Capital Cases in the same manner as those certifications were required under former Rule 20 of the Rules of Superintendence of the Courts of Ohio by R.C. 120.06, 120.14, 120.26, and 120.33 as those sections existed immediately before the bill's effective date.²³

Notification of application for pardon or commutation of sentence

Currently, when an application for a pardon or commutation of sentence of a person sentenced to death has been made, the Governor may modify the requirements of notification to the prosecutor, judge, and victim, and the requirements of publication, that otherwise would apply if there is not sufficient time for compliance with the requirements before the date fixed for the execution of sentence. The bill retains this provision, but consistent with the bill's other provisions, clarifies that it will apply only with respect to a person sentenced to death before the bill's effective date.²⁴
