SUMMARY

- Extends a person’s immunity from civil liability for donating perishable food to a nonprofit organization to include donations to a nonprofit that charges an amount that is sufficient to cover the cost of handling the food.

DETAILED ANALYSIS

Immunity associated with perishable food donation

Under current law, a person who makes a perishable food donation to a nonprofit is only immune from civil liability for that donation if the nonprofit provides the food free of charge. The bill, extends that immunity to a person who donates perishable food to a nonprofit that charges individuals in need an amount sufficient to cover the cost of handling the perishable food distributed to them.¹
