Highlights

- The bill may result in new criminal charges or potential enhanced penalties due to the bill's modifications to existing law related to the offenses of burglary, aggravated burglary, and trespass in a habitation when a person is present or likely to be present.
- To the extent that additional offenders are found guilty or sentenced to longer terms in prison, the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction (DRC) may experience a minimal increase in marginal incarceration expenditures over time.
- Any related costs to adjudicate these cases by local criminal justice systems would likely be offset, at least partially, from revenue in the form of fines, fees, and court costs collected from violators. The state may gain a negligible amount of revenue related to the portion of fines that are remitted to the state for each conviction.

Detailed Analysis

The bill creates the offenses of (1) aggravated burglary, (2) burglary, and (3) trespass in a habitation where a person is present or likely to be present that are the same as the current law offenses except that the new offenses do not require that the offender commit the offense by "force, stealth, or deception" and require the offender to commit the offense with a mental state of "knowingly." The expansion of certain elements for these offenses may make charges easier to file or ultimately prosecute, potentially leading to more convictions. All three offenses are subject to felony level sanctions, some of which could result in penalty enhancements depending on the circumstances surrounding the prohibited act. The net result could lead to additional offenders being sanctioned to incarceration in an institution operated by the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction (DRC) or for longer terms than they otherwise would have been sentenced to under current law. See the LSC bill analysis for a complete description of the changes to these three offenses.

Generally, the bill provides for the following range of penalties:

- Aggravated burglary (all circumstances) – first degree felony (same as current law);
- Burglary – third, second, or first degree felony, depending on circumstances present (potential penalty enhancement under the bill);
- Trespass in a habitation when a person is present or likely to be present – fourth or third degree felony, depending on circumstances present (potential penalty enhancement under the bill).

The table below illustrates the potential sanctions for each felony conviction. A sanction may include either a term of incarceration, a fine, or both. It should also be noted that for lower level felonies (e.g., F-4), community control could be a sentencing option for the courts.

Offense Level	Fine	Term of Incarceration
F-1	Up to $20,000	3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, or 11 years indefinite prison term
F-2	Up to $15,000	2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, or 8 years indefinite prison term
F-3	Up to $10,000	9, 12, 18, 24, 30, or 36 months definite prison term
		12, 18, 24, 30, 36, 42, 48, 54, or 60 months definite prison term*
F-4	Up to $5,000	6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, or 18 months definite prison term

*The longer sentence range applies to aggravated vehicular homicides and assaults, sexual battery, gross sexual imposition (GSI), sex with a minor, and robbery or burglary with two or more separate aggravated or nonaggravated robberies or burglaries.

Fiscal effect

Local criminal justice systems

The bill's modifications to current law and the creation of new offenses may impact criminal cases and how they are charged and ultimately adjudicated. However, the number of new cases generated annually will likely be minimal. Courts of common pleas, the courts with jurisdiction over felonies, may see an uptick in cases. However, more likely is that existing cases may be impacted in the manner that they are adjudicated. It is likely that offenders charged with any of these charges may also have other charges pending related to the incident. As such, the bill is not likely to add significantly to the number of criminal cases or the workload of law enforcement, the courts, prosecutors, and public defenders.

To the extent that additional charges are filed and lead to possible convictions though, there will be a corresponding increase in the amount of fine, fee, and court cost revenue generated for the state and political subdivisions, potentially offsetting in part any new costs.

Department of Rehabilitation and Correction

The Department of Rehabilitation and Correction (DRC) may experience an increase in related operating and incarceration costs if additional offenders are found guilty of any of these three offenses. In calendar year (CY) 2024, the marginal cost to house an individual inmate was $13.47 per day, or nearly $5,000 per year. Marginal costs are based on additional medical and mental health costs as well as food and clothing. It does not include additional security, facility, or administrative costs which have already been factored into the overall operating costs of DRC (i.e., institutional costs). For purposes of this fiscal note, using the marginal cost rate seems reasonable to presume.

Because the penalties for specific burglary and trespassing offenses could be increased, it is possible that some offenders convicted under this bill may serve longer sentences in the custody of DRC, potentially leading to a stacking effect over time.

Table 2 below displays the most recently available commitment and population data for like periods of time, specifically for the year ending around 2022.¹ The figures shown reflect the most serious offense committed by the offender. In many instances, the offender may have multiple convictions related to the same criminal activity. According to DRC's most recent time served report for CY 2016, the average time served for aggravated burglary was 7.76 years. The average time served for burglary was 3.97 years (F-2) and 2.1 years (F-3).^{2, 3}

Offense (most serious offense resulting in commitment to DRC)	CY 2022 Commitments	Percentage of Total Commitments	January 2023 Population	Percentage of Total Population
Aggravated Burglary	100	0.71%	1,207	2.76%
Burglary (all degree levels)	724	5.14%	2,152	4.92%
Trespass	1	--	1	0.0%
All Offenses	14,490	100%	43,758	100%
